Hi Year 5,

I'm missing you all so much - it feels very weird not seeing your smiley faces every day! It honestly makes me smile so much whenever you or your parents tweet me what you've been up to so make sure you keep doing it. However, I know not all of you are on Twitter so I wanted to send this letter to you to get in touch in another way.

So, what have I been up to without you lot to fill my day? Don't worry- I've stuck to guidelines at all times so there's nothing ground-breaking here. I have been trying to get my fitness levels up in this time. You know how much I enjoy going to the gym but unfortunately that's out of the question, so I've been sticking to the living room - has anyone else been doing Joe Wicks or any of the other home workouts? As I have no garden, I love my daily exercise and getting some fresh air. Next time your adult is telling you to go and get some fresh air in the garden, you should definitely think of me without one and listen to them - enjoy the sunshine whilst it's here! On one sunny day, I (completely unintentionally) went on a 21- mile bike ride - my legs hurt a lot after that! Maths challenge - can you find out what that is in km then convert it to m (clue- $1\text{km}=1000\text{m}$).

As some of you may have seen on Twitter, I've enjoyed having time to do some art too. I've done two paintings now but needed a little break so I'm now sticking to colouring which I find really therapeutic. Currently I'm reading our class book (no spoilers) for when we hopefully get to see each other again! Don't forget - I can see exactly what you have been up to on Bugclub so don't forget about it! I've also added some space related books for you to get into as this project is beyond awesome! Once you've read this letter, go and look for them. If you get a chance to reply, let me know what you think of them!

Speaking of our project, I hope you're all really enjoying it so far! I know I enjoyed doing my research for it and I definitely learnt some new things! Space is extremely fascinating and I hope you'll think that too whilst getting involved in this project. Did anyone manage to spot the meteors and satellites passing over-head last week?

With all that said, I have been busy working on getting our project completely finished off and lots of other teacher related jobs! I would love it if you are all able to reply to this and let me know what you've been up to too! You could write your letter and get it to me as a picture via Twitter, post it to school or (if you live close enough) post it through the school letterbox on your daily exercise. I can't wait to hear from you!

See you all soon, sending lots of love,

Miss Milson
