Hello Year 6!

How are you all doing? If you've been keeping an eye on our Twitter feed, you'll know that I miss each and every one of you so, so much. I can always rely on you all to make me laugh every single day when we're in school – and I especially miss our overly enthusiastic singing and dancing each morning in assembly! I cannot wait until we can all see each other again.

What have you been up to? I've used my spare time to make lots of music with my friends (without actually seeing them)! We've covered some of the songs that we learnt last term too. If you want to see some of the videos of this they're on YouTube (don't worry – I'm not becoming a cringey YouTuber): <https://www.youtube.com/channel/UC6vQIOLMifVqi9pQ89Q7I5Q>

I hope you're enjoying our new project as much as you can without actually being in school with Mexican music blasting out and me eating tortilla chips all day. Mexico is a great country to learn about – especially the main focus of our topic: Día de los Muertos. As always, if you want to share work you've done at home, even if it's nothing to do with our project, ask your parents to send a tweet to our class account. I've already seen some amazing salsa and piñatas this week! I'm very proud of all the reading that has been going on too.

Mrs Thomas is doing brilliantly and misses you all too. I saw her via Zoom a few days ago and she did a quiz. Unfortunately, I came second in the quiz. Can you guess who beat me by one single point? That's right – Miss Brooks!

Finally, I want to remind you all that you are simply incredible young people. You have all come so far this year - which has happened through your brilliant attitudes and ever-building resiliency. Keep positive, look after your families, and remain focused during this difficult time. Before we know it, we will see each other again.

Love and best wishes,

Mr Spendlow

PS: If you would like to write back, by all means do! You can either direct message a photo of it to our Twitter account or – if you live in the village and walk past school as part of your daily exercise – put it through the school letterbox (it's near the fire door of the Meeting Room).
